The University of Minho, Portugal, is recruiting students for their PhD program in Basic Psychology

We have 5 fellowships to give, each for 4 years. The fellowships pay tuition plus a monthly stipend of 980 Euros. This stipend enables the student to live comfortably in the city of Braga. The Animal Learning and Behavior Lab will have 1 of these fellowships .

The application and selection processes take place during September and October but the academic year starts only in February 2015 to give international students time to prepare their move.

The program is in English; it is well funded; has sufficient diversity; it is monitored by an international team; admits a small number of well-selected students, and “requires” a stay abroad in another lab/country. I believe we will provide students excellent training. If you want to know more, please visit our web site at
